GMAI Global Media Arts Institute

Global Media Arts Institute (GMAI) is a center of academic excellence in audiovisual matters devoted to cultivating young talent, training seasoned multimedia professionals and enhancing public awareness, understanding and appreciation of the media arts.

GMAI places special emphasis on television and film production and carries out programs on site and online, in coordination with Univirtual Global Dominicana.

GMAI is a program developed and operated by the Fundacion Global Democracia y Desarrollo (FUNGLODE) and the Global Foundation for Democracy and Development (GFDD).

Mission

GMAI seeks to encourage young talented people to pursue careers in the media arts, create a well-trained and highly professional work force in the field of multimedia, and in turn contribute to the development of a strong national multimedia industry and successful partnership with leading international institutions and projects. At the same time, through its numerous programs directed to general audiences, GMAI promotes and enhances overall understanding and appreciation of the media arts and their role in society.

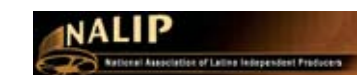

Vision

GMAI strives to be the key building block for a well developed and highly professional Dominican media arts industry that significantly contributes to the economic development, competitiveness and modernization of the country.

Throughout the year, GMAI regularly offers introductory, intermediate and advanced courses. It also organizes cultural events that promote better understanding of the media arts, such as screenings, discussion panels and interviews with filmmakers.

International Partners

In order to accomplish its mission, GMAI partners with numerous renowned international institutions, such as: New York University and its Opportunities Program, One Race Films, Escuela Internacional de Cine y Television de Cuba and NALIP, among others.
